MIP
Executive Master for International Players
– Third edition –
New challenges can be daunting. After so many years excelling in one profession, it is not easy to turn the page and try something else. However, turning the page does not mean turning your back on football. It is clear to me that the skills you learned during your illustrious careers can be honed and tuned in order for you to work in the game you love.

That is where the UEFA Executive Master for International Players (UEFA MIP) comes in. Along with our academic and football partners, we have created a programme that aims to give former elite players the necessary resources to stay in the sport after they have decided to hang up their boots.

The core element of the UEFA MIP is the belief that football always comes first. During my years in football, I have seen many instances where the experience acquired by top players at the peaks of their club and international football careers have made valuable contributions to the development of our beautiful game. I would like this trend to continue and even grow stronger.

So what exactly can you expect from the programme? It aims to provide you with the necessary skills to advance yourselves as decision-makers and leaders within the framework of football administration and management. The interactive and dynamic course sets out to help you achieve your professional goals and empower you to make positive contributions to the shaping of football’s future.

UEFA knows that your experience and your expertise cannot go to waste and that is why we encourage you to play an influential role in the world of football. As you take this step towards a new chapter in your life, we will be there to support you and make sure that together we ensure the game keeps the core values that have made it the most popular sport in the world.

Aleksander Čeferin
UEFA President
Former internationals who have played at the highest level have a lot to offer in the administration and management of football.

The UEFA MIP is a unique programme that has been tailor-made to meet the needs of players accustomed to winning trophies on the field, giving them a toolkit with which to lay the foundations for success off the field.

Players often show leadership, change the course of a match and shape their club or team’s environment, but these qualities do not necessarily transfer by themselves into elite management skills away from the field of play. The UEFA MIP takes the abilities of elite players and moulds them into those of successful managers.

The UEFA MIP ensures that footballers hear the half-time rather than the final whistle at the end of their professional playing days, giving them the tools for match-winning performances in football administration and management as part of a second career.
A second elite career

Making the transition from top player to top leader

The UEFA MIP equips high-profile international players to transfer their playing strengths into effective management skills.

Leadership, discipline and a commitment to high-level performance are the hallmarks of trophy winners – applying those traits to the organisation of football is among the primary aims of the course.

Key roles in all areas of football thrive on vision, planning, analysis and observation – the UEFA MIP helps former players to apply these skills in an administrative context, producing role models for success across multiple spheres of football management.

From this point of view, the programme is designed to bridge the gap between the ‘technical skills’ gained by experienced players and the ‘administrative knowledge’ necessary to occupy senior positions within football organisations. The UEFA MIP considers the main challenges top executives face today and explores their environment to ensure a smooth, successful transition from top player to top leader.

Testimonials

What they think about the UEFA MIP

Éric Abidal
Technical secretary, FC Barcelona

“I decided to join this programme because I knew it would help me prepare for my future career. Previously, I was always afraid that people only saw me as an elite player. The UEFA MIP has helped me to become more confident, increase my professional knowledge and gain greater credibility as a future manager.”

Bianca Rech
Team management sports – women’s football department, FC Bayern München

“The UEFA MIP is something unique. It’s not about getting an education from a regular university, it is so much more! The team spirit we experience every day with fellow participants is inspirational. We love football, we are team-mates and you can feel that in every session. This programme has led me to develop both personally and professionally. I have realised just how important the skills that I gained as a professional player are and how I have managed to turn them into managerial skills.”

Kaspars Gorkšs
President, Latvian Football Federation

“Football has always played a significant role in my life and my biggest heroes come from the football pitch. To get a chance to learn from them, to share my experience and views with them is at the same time frightening and motivating. The ambitions of the people surrounding you drive you forward and give you confidence to achieve your own goals and dreams. I believe that the UEFA MIP programme can open a lot of doors to the world of football and give you the right tools to make sure you do not get lost on this journey.”

Luis García
Consultant, Sky Sports and BeIn Sports

“When I retired from football, I wasn’t sure what to do, and coaching didn’t seem to be the right choice for me. I looked for an education programme that could help me learn more about the business side of the world I already knew. From the first day, every moment of the sessions was beneficial. I met really inspiring people and shared a worthwhile experience with my fellow participants.”

Maxwell
Team coordinator, Paris Saint-Germain FC

“The UEFA MIP was a great opportunity for me to gain a better understanding of the football world and prepare for the future. This programme opened my eyes to topics that are a long way from the game on the pitch, such as marketing, broadcasting, finances, etc. It also gave me an overview of the regulations and the ecosystem of sports organisations.”

Sebastian Kehl
Head of professional football, Borussia Dortmund

“When I stopped playing professionally, I was looking for new challenges! The goal was to find my new career. I knew that I had a lot of experience as a team leader, but I wanted to increase my skills, my knowledge and continue to develop. So, the UEFA MIP was the right place for me to start. This programme is tailor-made for former players with a lot of active learning, practical exercises and real-life situations.”

Programme overview

An international programme for international participants

The UEFA MIP is tailored to match each participant’s interests and profile. It comprises seven week-long sessions (sessions start on Monday lunchtime and finish on Friday lunchtime), each of which deals with a different aspect of football administration and management. Delivered in English, the sessions are held over a period of 20 months in major European cities (Amsterdam, Barcelona, London, Dortmund’s region and Paris), all home to leading clubs and organisations in football. Exceptionally, the first session takes place at UEFA headquarters in Nyon, Switzerland, while the final session takes place in New York, where participants will learn about the American model of sport. For those who do not already work in a sports organisation, the course also includes a three-month work placement offering practical experience.

Successful participants are awarded an executive master’s degree by the University of Limoges.

The course speakers, whether academics or practitioners, are among the most influential international experts in their fields. Their rich and diverse sessions focus on football and other sports organisations, stadiums, football events, and the challenges faced by senior managers today, in particular in terms of marketing, communication, strategy and human resources. Evidence of similar challenges in other industries and how these are dealt with is also provided throughout the programme.

Session overviews

Let’s talk about football!

Induction day
8 October 2019, UEFA HQ, Nyon, Switzerland
Shortlisted applicants will be invited to UEFA HQ for an interview before the UEFA MIP team makes its final decision on admission. During the day the UEFA MIP team will present the programme’s philosophy and explain its main objectives. You will be invited to introduce yourself and your aspirations for the future.

Session 1
4–7 November 2019
UEFA HQ, Nyon, Switzerland

Framework of professional sport
Professional sport as an industry, like any other, is subject to certain rules and has certain specificities. Whatever the organisation you work for, you must have a perfect understanding of the specificities of the sports industry. This, as well as the knowledge and legitimacy gained during your career as a player, will enable you to be a more effective manager. This session aims to help you identify which skills you possess that can be used as a top manager.

Main objectives:
• Present the general institutional, legal and economic framework of the European professional sports system and its major challenges.
• Present concrete examples of management careers for former international players.
• Highlight the key skills that managers require and that are gained by professional players during their sporting careers.
• Introduce features of team sports economics and present the economic development of professional sport in Europe.

Role and skills of the manager
Some of the skills you acquired in your career as an elite athlete are directly transferable to the role of a top manager; others need complementing. Your role as a manager is then to apply these skills to a clearly defined, coherent project plan that takes into account the history, culture and values of the organisation you work for.

During this session you will learn from the experiences of several managers from sporting and business backgrounds. With the help of various activities, you will also be invited to reflect on what kind of manager you would like to become.

Main objectives:
• Identify different management styles.
• Highlight the key skills of successful managers in sport and other industries.
• Highlight the importance of having a clear vision, a defined strategy and a managerial project.
• Introduce features of strategic management.
• Introduce features of project management and provide concrete and simple project management tools.
Session 3
6–9 April 2020
London, UK

Format and regulation of competitions
The sports system involves a very large number of stakeholders whose constraints can be hard to reconcile (sporting vs. business concerns, sporting vs. national and European legal frameworks, etc.). It is the combination of these different elements that makes sport a complex system that needs special rules, at the heart of which must remain the preservation of the spirit of sporting competition itself. This session addresses the challenges inherent in finding the best format for sports competitions.

Main objectives:
• Explain the key principles informing successful club and national competition design, using illustrative case studies.
• Illustrate the importance of effective regulation and governance systems in competitions’ success.
• Illustrate the governance and regulatory environment of the football player labour market.
• Explain the context of the recent development of women’s football and illustrate the critical success factors in developing elite women’s football leagues, using illustrative case studies.

Session 4
May or July 2020
Barcelona, Spain

The manager in action
Now more than ever, managers are expected to demonstrate new leadership styles, different approaches to motivation, negotiation techniques and management skills. This session will also address communication and finance in order to have a better understanding of these topics. The general objective of the session is to understand the importance of the staff within a sports organisation and the role of the manager as the leader of a professional group. You will be provided with a manager’s toolbox to run everyday projects efficiently and deal with unfortunate events successfully.

Main objectives:
• Work on negotiation, motivation, decision-making and communication skills.
• Explain how to create coherent projects and how to manage them.
• Illustrate the critical success factors in conducting efficient meetings in the context of sports organisations.
• Illustrate the critical success factors in efficient networking.
• Explain and illustrate how the world of communications has changed and how this has had an impact on football stakeholders, including players.
• Provide training on communication, involving real-life crisis management cases.
Session 5
21–25 September 2020
Amsterdam, Netherlands

Strategic marketing and communication
The modern demands on sports organisations are such that the organisations must develop effective financial models based on solid strategic marketing programmes. Strategic marketing enables organisations to develop and capitalise on their assets, i.e. the sport, the brand, the matches and the various associated rights. During this session, you will learn from the experiences of several high-profile speakers with sporting and marketing backgrounds. Through various activities, you will also be invited to reflect on various elements of strategic marketing and to put together a marketing plan for a football match.

Main objectives:
- Demonstrate the various elements of strategic marketing, and how research can help in the decision-making and monitoring process.
- Explain the importance of branding in football and get you to think like brands.
- Highlight the importance of data and introduce the various elements of fan engagement.
- Introduce the concept of sponsorship from both a rights holder’s perspective and a sponsor’s perspective.
- Explain and illustrate how the world of broadcasting and media rights is evolving.
- Illustrate how marketing can help increase participation at grassroots level.

Session 6
7–11 December 2020
Dortmund’s region, Germany

Stadiums and operations management
Stadiums are a major concern for sports organisations (both clubs and national associations) that wish to manage their futures: they are an important asset, they generate revenue and they help to establish a special bond with the local community and fans. This session will give you an overall understanding of the issues relating to stadium management (ownership, the role of each stakeholder, various roles in running a stadium and different business models) and will also give you an insight into operations management notably through witnessing the inner workings of a UEFA club competition’s match.

Main objectives:
- Introduce stadium policies in different countries, economic issues and the role of stakeholders.
- Show the impact that the overall organisation of sport can have on stadiums through a national association’s development policy.
- Show how a stadium owned by public authorities or a national association is run.
- Demonstrate the role and importance of a stadium for the development of a club.
- Present stadiums as profit centres and provide examples of different business models.
- Analyse the operations roles of managers in stadiums.
- Understand and experience the operational management of a high-profile club competition.
North American leagues and clubs
The organisation of professional sport in North America and Europe is completely different. By learning about another sports model with its own history and culture, you will carry out an in-depth analysis of the specificities of the major North American professional sport leagues and clubs. This session will enable you to broaden your own managerial horizons and acquire new tools for success.

Main objectives:
• Complement the European perspective with a very different but prosperous model.
• Explain the economic and regulatory structure used to achieve competitive balance and financial stability.
• Explain the regulation of players’ salaries and the use of a franchise system with a geographic monopoly.
• Introduce Major League Soccer and illustrate the strategy of a football club within this league.
• Present collective bargaining agreements as a key element of regulation and exemptions from competition law.
• Highlight the collective sale of media rights as a redistributive tool and the collective sale and redistribution of league merchandising revenues.

Final examination
UEFA competition – May–June 2021, TBC
Each participant will be invited to present their final report orally, in front of the UEFA MIP examination board, one or two days before the UEFA Champions League final. This is your opportunity to defend your project or the topic of your report and present the challenges and strategies involved.

Graduation ceremony
28 October 2021, UEFA HQ, Nyon, Switzerland
Following this oral exam, a graduation ceremony will be organised. This ceremony will mark the end of your UEFA MIP journey and the start of a new chapter in your career.
Assessment

Individual monitoring and tailored assignments to help you succeed

The assessment process has been specially designed to help and support each participant in his or her study journey. Moreover, a monitoring system has been developed to meet the specific needs of each participant and put them in the best position to succeed in the UEFA MIP.

Continuous assessment and collective work
Assessment is tailor-made according to your background. It is mostly based on your involvement and oral participation during the sessions, your ability to transfer the skills needed to be a manager from your former role, your contribution to the dynamics of the group during the case studies and group exercises, and your ability to develop a professional project. In addition, through different exercises, you can experience real-life situations and learn how to work within a team to find solutions together and share knowledge and skills. The following exercises are usually used during the UEFA MIP:

• Case studies & workshops
  Participants are divided into groups and receive a case study on a real-life issue from the sporting world encountered during the session. You suggest solutions and give a presentation to the other groups. This exercise will help you improve your communication skills and will give you more confidence when speaking in front of a large audience. It will also enable you all to gain first-class knowledge on key issues, to work as a team and to improve your persuasion skills and ability to compromise.

• Simulation
  This exercise will enable you to simulate normal operations and incidents during real-life situations, such as the activities and roles involved in organising a UEFA Champions League match or running a project within one organisation over several months. It will give you an insight into the decision-making and communication process, testing your ability as managers to successfully implement activities and projects and manage incidents when they occur.

• Shadowing
  Participants will be divided into small groups and will shadow the different venue staff involved in a UEFA club competition’s game. You will benefit from the knowledge and expertise of UEFA experts. This complements classroom learning, as you will get to experience first-hand what it takes to be a leader, thereby furthering your own managerial skills.

Mentoring
You will be assigned a mentor who will support you throughout the whole programme. Mentors can answer questions arising from the different sessions or assignments, help you to build your professional project, advise on internships, provide suggested readings, challenge assumptions and recommendations where necessary, and give you the tools to find a managerial issue to be addressed in the UEFA MIP report.
E-learning
Participants have access to an e-learning platform to deepen their knowledge and go into further detail on some issues tackled during sessions. The UEFA MIP uses top-class content that UEFA and academic partners have already developed for programmes such as the UEFA Certificate in Football Management. This educational tool is optional and used at the participants’ discretion.

Individual work
You must do individual work in addition to the group work and continuous assessment. The UEFA MIP mentors provide continuous assistance throughout this work, especially for the UEFA MIP report.

- Professional project presentation
  During the induction day, applicants present the professional project that they would like to pursue. With the support of the UEFA MIP team and mentors, who provide advice and tools, you will be required to present your professional project again during session 2. This will enable the UEFA MIP team and your mentor to get more information on your future career plan and to give you tailor-made guidance throughout the programme. It will also help the UEFA MIP team to assess your strengths and weaknesses and the skills you would particularly need to improve during the programme.

- UEFA MIP report
  The UEFA MIP report is neither a university thesis nor a master's dissertation. It is part of your professional career plan. You must write a report tackling a specific managerial issue that is relevant to a sports organisation and/or the sports industry as a whole. This report must be defended orally at the end of the programme, before the UEFA MIP examination board. The aim of this work is to help you increase the value of your experience by applying your knowledge and practical experience to concrete issues encountered by managers and organisations in the sports industry. It will also enable you to define your professional goals and outline your contributions to sports management with reference to a specific issue.

Three-month work placement
You are required to gain practical experience in a sports organisation. If you are not yet working for such an organisation, you must therefore undertake a work placement lasting at least three months. The objective of the work placement is to finalise your individual career plan and help you to find the perfect job for you. The UEFA MIP team can provide assistance in finding placements, which can be highly flexible and completed in stages or over three consecutive months.
The UEFA MIP is delivered by two world-class academic institutions: the Centre de Droit et d’Economie du Sport (CDES) at the University of Limoges, France, and the Birkbeck Sport Business Centre, Birkbeck, University of London.

CDES has extensive experience in retraining professional players through its general manager’s diploma, which has been running since 1999 and has an excellent reputation. Alumni include Zinédine Zidane, Laurent Blanc, Olivier Dacourt and Dominique Rocheteau.

Birkbeck, University of London, meanwhile, has considerable experience in researching the organisation, governance and business management of football organisations, and in delivering postgraduate sport management programmes. It collaborates closely with UEFA and has developed the FIFPro Professional Education Programme together with FIFPro, the world players’ union.

By building on experience and successful long-term cooperation, and by bringing together the best teaching staff and speakers, the UEFA MIP is set to become the ultimate academic programme in sports management for former international professional athletes.

Both CDES and Birkbeck are also academic partners of the Executive Master in Sport Governance (MESGO), a world-class training programme for decision-makers in sport, developed in close cooperation with UEFA and other leading sports organisations.
