PROGRAMMES FOR PLAYERS

We provide players with education initiatives tailored to all stages of their professional life

UEFA's mission has always been to promote and protect the beautiful game throughout Europe. This includes encouraging professional footballers to pursue their education during and after their time on the pitch. Suitable qualifications enable them to start a new career in football after they retire, while exploiting the skills they honed while playing. For this reason, UEFA recently developed a broad range of education programmes dedicated to elite football players, leading to jobs in management, administration, scouting or the media, for example. We are confident that these initiatives will have a positive impact on players' future prospects while keeping skilled professionals within the football ecosystem.

Aleksander Čeferin

UEFA President

What our graduates and experts say

"It is really ground-breaking for UEFA to develop such a broad offer of programmes for players. I believe that getting guidance at all stages of your career is crucial to personal and professional growth and development on and off the pitch. No matter whether you are an active or retired player, the UEFA Academy has a variety of learning initiatives tailored to your needs that can help you achieve your professional goals."

Maxwell Scherrer, UEFA

"It is essential for players to be aware of the various opportunities that are open to them for a second career. When I retired from football, I wasn't sure what to do and coaching didn't seem to be the right choice for me. I looked for an education programme that could help me learn more about the business side of football and found the UEFA MIP. The experience was intense and beneficial, as it gave me the knowledge I needed to work in football management."
